If Massachusetts was able to collect sales taxes on transactions conducted over the Internet, the state could add $339 million to its coffers, money that could be used to fund transportation infrastructure, according to Treasurer Steven Grossman. Grossman said Tuesday that the state should negotiate an agreement with Amazon.com and that Congress should pass a federal law that would allow states to collect online sales taxes nationwide. SHNS

Official: DOC to appeal Kosilek sex change decision

BOSTON. The Department of Correction plans to appeal the federal court ruling that the state must pay for a sex-change operation for convicted murderer Michelle Kosilek, according to a Patrick administration official.

Kosilek, who changed her name from Robert and is currently serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole for strangling and murdering her wife in 1990, successfully sued the state for a sex-change operation in a landmark court case. The judge also ruled that the state was responsible for Kosilek's legal fees.

Boston clamoring about craft beer

► From beer tastings to brewery tours and suds clubs, Boston is raising the brew bar ► Is beer the new wine?

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

With the arrival of autumn, it's easy to fawn over pumpkin-spiced coffee and apple picking, but a good number of Bostonians are perked up for another reason — Oktoberfest.

The traditional beer holiday begins Friday and as Boston's brew-friendly events are announced (see Friday's Metro), it's hard not to notice that the Hub takes its beer seriously.

Many craft beer enthusiasts say that Boston's beer palate is becoming more refined.

"It's more than just beer. It's people getting more interested in honest food that tastes good and has a story behind it," said Jeff Wharton, co-founder of Drinkcraftbeer.com, a site that spotlights local suds and offers instructions on home brewing.

Lots of Boston-area beer clubs are going strong, with hundreds of members meeting for tastings and beer-focused discussion.

Chris Parker, owner of Beersinboston.com, said that although Boston has been a beer town for quite a while — with Samuel Adams and Harpoon among the most popular micro breweries in the country — the city's attitude toward beer has definitely shifted over the past few years.

"It seems that each month there is a new craft beer festival or event, and each month they are selling out," Parker said.

Part of it, he said, has to do with the fact that craft beer popularity is on a sharp rise on the national level.

In August, the Brewers Association released data that shows craft beer is expanding faster than ever in the post-prohibition era. There are now more than 2,000 breweries in the U.S., with hundreds more in the planning stages.

"Boston is on the forefront of this charge for a few reasons," Parker said. "One being its reputation and history within the industry, giving it somewhat of a head start, and the other being its progressive nature. Bostonians are willing to accept and try new things, so that has definitely helped the surge of craft beer's popularity on the local level."

When asked why Boston's beer lovers are paying more at-

► There's no Bud, Miller or Coors at this bar.

Just what is a craft beer?

An American craft brewer is small, independent and traditional, according to the Brewers Association. The beers often offer unique twists on historic beer styles, and are generally made with traditional ingredients, like malted barley, but include "interesting" and sometimes nontraditional ingredients for distinctiveness. ● METRO/MR

"I think it's a bigger trend toward more local, artisan, craft-made everything — food and drink products. Craft beer and spirits are catching up with that."

tention to their suds, Harpoon CEO and co-founder Rich Doyle said part of it has to do with the seemingly endless food pairing possibilities, but it is also about choices.

"I think the great thing about beer is that there is a range you can get. ... You've got

Hub suds

- ▶ Boston Beer Club
- ▶ Gay Beer Club

such a broad spectrum of bitterness and body and malt richness and aroma. You've got so many things to work with, and you can really complement a wide range of food items."

Merrimac girl many called 'Mrs. Bieber' dies

The 6-year-old Merrimac girl who gained national attention for her special visit and kiss with music superstar Justin Bieber died yesterday morning.

Avalanna Routh's family broke the news of her death on her Twitter account.

"Our darling Avalanna went to Heaven this morning. Oh Avalanna, the brightest star — you took our hearts with you, our greatest Love" read the post Wednesday from @avalanna, which had more than 145,000 followers.

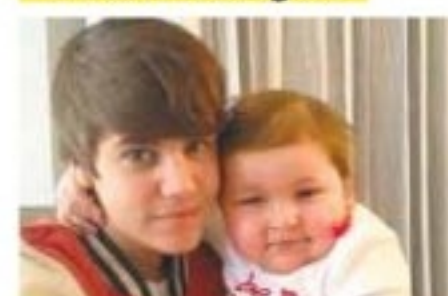

Bieber, on Twitter, asked his more than 28 million followers to pray for her and her family.

"Just got the worst news ever: one of the greatest spirits i have ever known is gone. please pray for her family and for her," Bieber tweeted yesterday afternoon. "RIP Avalanna. i love you."

Routh, who was diagnosed with rare brain cancer at 9 months old, made national news when she met Bieber in February and got to plant a kiss on the singer's cheek. The teen superstar made a special visit to her when he learned of her love for him. He also invited her onstage at a concert earlier this year.

Yesterday, Bieber also tweeted a link to Cure RT/AT Now, a website dedicated to those fighting atypical teratoid rhabdoid tumors and asked that his followers "show respect to her and her family." Routh was able to meet

Police step up patrols after more students at BU robbed

Police are stepping up patrols in Brookline after a pair of Boston University students was robbed at gunpoint Tuesday evening, making it the second robbery of BU students in three days.

Boston University police were expected to add three more patrols to the Brookline neighborhoods where the robberies occurred, according to BU Today. Brookline police were also expected to up patrols in the neighborhood.

The most recent robbery occurred about 5 p.m. on Egmont Street when two students said they were approached by three men who showed a gun, according to Brookline police. The men then took the students' backpacks, BU Today reported.

Witnesses told police that the men were later seen near Pleasant and Dummer streets stuffing the sweatshirts they were wearing into backpacks.

The first robbery occurred just before 2 a.m. Sunday on Hamilton Road. The two students said they were walking back to their apartment when two men approached them, showed a gun and took their wallets.

The suspects

Witnesses described the suspects in both robberies.

- ▶ The suspects in the most recent robbery were described as two black men and one light-skinned man. All were between the ages of 16 and 20 and wore sweatshirts.
- ▶ The suspects in the first robbery on Hamilton Street were described as black men. One was about 16 years old and was wearing a white zip-up sweatshirt. The other suspect was in his early 20s and was wearing a striped blue-and-white shirt with long sleeves.
- ▶ Anyone with information can text tip411 (847411), keyword "BU."

None of the students were injured in either incident.

Authorities urged students living on or off campus to avoid poorly lit areas, get a ride instead of walking and be aware of surroundings.

UC Berkeley pays $1M to settle pepper spray lawsuit

University officials in California have agreed to pay $1 million to settle a lawsuit over a pepper spraying incident last year that came to symbolize law enforcement aggression against anti-Wall Street protesters, court papers filed yesterday showed.

Studies question value of organic; consumers' green goals are fading

GETTY IMAGES

The organic foods market is abuzz, and not in a good way. A study released by Stanford University last week asked if "paying a premium" for quality organic food stuffs was really "worth it."

Unfortunately for the organics market, the answer from Stanford researchers was "not really."

"Despite the widespread perception that organically produced foods are more nutritious than conventional alternatives, we did not find robust evidence to support this perception," the study says.

The study goes on to note that the organics market has grown from $3.7 billion in 1997 to $26.7 billion today, with consumers saying they want to live a so-called "green lifestyle" no matter what research studies say — at least for now, and with financial limitations in place.

Another study, this one released Monday by GfK Green Gauge, says green culture has gone "mainstream" in recent years but finds some limits. "At a time of slow economic recovery, paying significantly more to be environmentally friendly simply doesn't compute for most people," the study says.

"Green awareness is indeed pervasive — but consumers can perceive 'green' claims as a negative in some contexts," said Timothy Kenyon, director for GfK's Green Gauge survey. "For example, while terms like 'organic' and 'recyclable' have strong positive resonance, they are often associated with higher prices." MAINSTREET.COM

The study

- The GfK study indicates consumers are striving to achieve some balance in living the green lifestyle. They want to embrace the culture but won't open their pocketbooks too much to meet their organic living goals.
- The organics market has grown from $3.7 billion in 1997 to $26.7 billion today.

73%

of American adults have bought an organic product in the past year, including foodstuff, household supplies and clothing.

93%

say they have taken steps to "conserve energy" during the past year, and 77% say they have "done something" to conserve water.

29%

of study respondents are turning to mobile phone apps to improve their green lifestyles, especially for help in finding public transportation.

Soldier faces manslaughter rap in hiccups killing at base

A Fort Hood soldier who shot dead a fellow soldier in an ill-fated attempt to cure him of the hiccups has been charged with manslaughter, authorities said yesterday.

The incident occurred when Private First Class Isaac Lawrence Young, 22, came down with a case of the hiccups while the soldiers were watching a football game on television Sunday night.

In an attempt to scare the hiccups out of his friend, Private First Class Patrick Edward Myers, 27, pointed a handgun at Young and fired once, according to an arrest affidavit. A bullet struck Young in his eye.

Police said Myers admitted to shooting Young and told responders on the scene the shooting was an accident. Myers said he thought he had loaded the gun with dummy rounds, according to police.

The soldiers had been drinking, police said.

Young later died in an ambulance. REUTERS

$1M

Myers was charged with manslaughter and is being held on $1 million bond.

Five hiccup cures

- 1 Drink about a half a teaspoon of pickle juice every 7-10 seconds until hiccups stop.
- 2 Drink a normal-sized gulp of water, but don't swallow. Leave the water in your mouth. Pull down both your earlobes. Tilt your head back. Swallow.
- 3 Get a pencil and bite down on it, so that it's sitting horizontally between your teeth. Drink a glass of water with the pencil still in your mouth. Drink as much of the water as you can without the pencil falling out.
- 4 Stick your tongue out. Hold it with your hand if you need to. Keep your tongue stuck out for several minutes.
- 5 Get a big tablespoon of peanut butter. Put it in your mouth and hold it for five seconds. Swallow the peanut butter without chewing. METRO

US feeling better than in 2009; skeptical of Obama

Better off?

More Americans see themselves as better off since Obama took office in January 2009. "I certainly don't think it's where we want to be, but it's better," says poll respondent Mica Darley-Emerson of Ohio.

Public confidence in the U.S. economy is bolstering President Barack Obama's reelection chances even as Americans continue to view his stewardship skeptically.

As recently as six months ago, Americans were evenly split on whether their lives were better or worse than when Obama took office. This question has been fundamental to presidential campaigns since Ronald Reagan posed it in 1980: "Are you better off now than you were four years ago?" BLOOMBERG

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR METRO

TAKE THIS TO THE BANK: BIG DONORS GET WHAT THEY PAY FOR

Earlier this week, Mitt Romney came out in favor of regulating campaign finance — but only for donors that contribute overwhelmingly to Democrats.

Asked about the teachers union strike in Chicago, Romney said that the real problem is not their ability to strike — but their ability to give money to politicians. "We simply can't have a setup where the teachers unions can contribute tens of millions of dollars to the campaigns of politicians and then those politicians, when elected, stand across from them at the bargaining table, supposedly to represent the interests of the kids," Romney explained, adding that, to avoid this conflict of interest, teachers unions should not be permitted to contribute to political campaigns.

Indeed, it's hard to trust a politician who is notoriously greased by one side of a dispute.

Mitt Romney would have to admit, then, that he has a massive conflict of interest when it comes to the big banks. All of Mitt Romney's top donors work for the big banks. By contrast, none of Barack Obama's top donors are banks; they are accounting and law firms, universities, software companies and (not surprisingly) federal government employees. By Romney's own logic, Obama is far more likely to put the country's interests ahead of the big banks, so massive and one-sided are the banks' contributions to the Romney campaign.

Of course, it was Barack Obama in 2008 who received the overwhelming share of his campaign cash from the big banks, and look what they bought. For treasury secretary, Obama chose Tim Geithner — the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York who, from 2003-2009, was responsible for regulating the big banks (heck of a job, Timmy).

Obama's Justice Department has failed to prosecute a single banker, despite evidence of rampant fraud. The big banks are still exposed to more than $200 trillion in derivatives bets — an

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

'Bachelorette' stars: Faking it for fame

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

► Fakers!

The new issue of Us Weekly has a very entertaining cover story on how "Bachelorette" stars Emily Maynard and Jef Holm are faking their engagement.

I know, I know: It's hard to believe that two fame junkies pretended to be together on a rigged reality TV show to gain attention, but stay with me here.

Apparently, Holm's former girlfriend and current hookup buddy (who he was dating when he went on "The Bachelorette") went into tell-all mode to Us Weekly. The ex, Kaylee Shepherd, says that Holm revealed to her that he and Maynard are faking it. In August, a "texting scandal" hit — Maynard was caught sexting another man, which Us Weekly, the Woodward and Bernstein of tabloids, uncovered. Maynard, desperate to preserve her good-girl image, hatched a plan to pay off Holm with half of her

"Bachelorette" money. "Jef said their relationship isn't what it seems. It's all basically for TV," Shepherd tells Us.

"It's all basically for TV"? You don't say. Next thing you know, you'll be telling me some actors and actresses get plastic surgery and/or take too many prescription drugs in order to fill the dark void that being famous created. Stop ruining my happy place, Us Weekly!

Kate Gosselin's bodyguard moves on to Honey Boo Boo

Kate Gosselin's bodyguard has moved on from the "Plus 8" family to a new, more up-and-coming dysfunctional brood: the "Honey Boo Boo" clan.

According to Wet Paint, the unnamed bodyguard is watching the whole family, and not just breakout star Alana.

They "like to go out and eat at local restaurants at all hours of the day or night," a source tells the site. This habit prompted the recent hiring of two guards to help with security.

I don't know who you are, fearless reality TV bodyguard, but I really hope you are taking notes for an upcoming memoir. That would be magical.

Miley Cyrus: We are forever

Don't expect Miley Cyrus and fiancé Liam Hemsworth to rush down the aisle anytime soon. "I already feel married. I know we are forever. I don't need the paper right now," Cyrus tells Us Weekly. "I don't know when we will get married yet. We are still enjoying being engaged. I've got so much planning to do with the tours and getting my record out. First I have my movie, then my record — then I'll do my wedding planning."

Question: Don't young, ridiculously famous people know that by now, every time they say, "we are forever," they have completely doomed their relationship?

Doomed

DO YOU DRINK AT LEAST ONE SODA, SPORTS DRINK OR FRUIT PUNCH PER DAY?

10 REASONS TO GO TO THE MOVIES

2 'Hotel Transylvania'
Even spooky monsters need a vacation. While their destination of choice may be the eponymous lodge, the creepy-crawly community is threatened by humans who wish to stay at the resort as well. Adam Sandler and his usual crowd — Kevin James, David Spade, etc. — helm this animated picture.

3 'Won't Back Down'
Just in time to feed off the energy of irate parents and teachers, this David and Goliath story is about a powerful school bureaucracy and the parents and teachers (Viola Davis, Maggie Gyllenhaal) who wish to change it.

4 'End of Watch'
Jake Gyllenhaal and Michael Pena star as beat cops who are in over their heads when they start messing with a drug ring.

Must-see

1 'Looper'
Not since "Back to the Future Part II" have we witnessed such a brain-teasing time-travel tale. Starring Bruce Willis, Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Emily Blunt, this thriller follows an assassin who finds that he is meant to kill his older self. Only Doc Brown could explain what this does to the space-time continuum.

▶ Joseph Gordon-Levitt and his eyebrows star in this weekend's time-travel action-thriller, "Looper."

5 'Trouble with the Curve'
Clint Eastwood, Amy Adams and Justin Timberlake star in this light drama about an aging baseball scout.

6 'House at the End of the Street'
Stripped of her survivalist persona, Jennifer Lawrence of "Winter's Bone" and "The Hunger Games" takes on a more formidable foe than nature: a community haunted by a double murder.

7 'Resident Evil: Retribution'
Milla Jovovich returns as Alice in this series' fifth installment.

8 'Dredd' 3-D
"I am the law," says the judge, jury and executioner of this movie's title, rampaging through a postapocalyptic future where most are under the rule of a reality-altering drug called SLO-MO.

9 'Finding Nemo' 3-D
This beloved 2003 Disney film about a clown fish in search of his dad gets a 3-D update.

10 'The Words'
Bradley Cooper stars as a struggling author who finally has a best-selling book. The problem is that he didn't write it. METRO

▶ Lucy Liu and Jonny Lee Miller star as Watson and Holmes in "Elementary."

'Elementary'

DRAMA. Sherlock fanatics are already up in arms over the casting of Lucy Liu as the traditionally male Watson to Jonny Lee Miller's Holmes. Another sticking point for purists: The quintessential British detective now finds himself solving crimes in modern-day New York City. Anything else? Well,

'Louie'

COMEDY. Louie has anything but a very merry December in tonight's season finale. Season finale, 10 p.m., FX

'Saturday Night Live: Primetime Election Special'

SPECIAL. Will a parody of any politician this election season reach the lofty comedic heights of Tina Fey's Sarah Palin last go-round? If not, it's not for a lack of source material. 8 p.m., NBC

'Two and a Half Men'

OH, TO HAVE A CRUSH

► Our newest dating columnist, Amber Madison, demystifies the nature of infatuation ► Why more time and exposure make the heart grow fonder

The hookup

WWW.AMBERMADISONONLINE.COM

It usually starts with a brief interaction that — from the outside — probably didn't look too significant. But from that interaction, a crush was born. With every casual run-in, something else would convince you that your crush was perfect. And as you admired him or her from afar, the pedestal you put your object of affection on grew higher and higher.

In the real world, our dating pool consists of strangers that we either meet at a bar, through a friend or online. And disappointingly, meeting these strangers is often pretty unspectacular. But that's not because singles in your city suck. Decades of research on interpersonal attraction show that the more we see a person, the more we like them — meaning there's only so much you're physically capable of liking someone you just met. You can't expect to have a crush on someone you've just started dating, simply because you don't know them well enough.

Living in a city full of people can make it feel like your options are endless. But it's a mistake to jump from one person to the next, waiting for someone who lives up to your every fantasy. No one will. Date conversations illuminate such a small sliver of who someone is. Some of the people you've dismissed might be ones you would have developed feelings for if you had met them in another context.

If you've been lucky enough to actually date someone you spent months fantasizing about, you know that person can't exactly live up to who you built him or her up to be. So while the prospect of dating someone you haven't put on a pedestal for months is certainly less exciting, it is more real. And reality is a good thing, because it's not eighth grade anymore.

Now, we're playing for keeps.

In 2002, thousands of New England's janitors went on strike to secure decent wages, health benefits, and fundamental dignity as workers. Modest gains were made, but large problems still remain. Most janitors are not provided health care or decent wages because they remain chronically under-employed. To make ends meet they must work long hours in a patchwork of part-time jobs, leaving them with little precious time to be with their families or communities.

Today, in a time of steadily rising profits for New England's strongest industries, cleaning contractors want to take back what modest security janitors have gained.

As faith leaders, we decry this outright greed that would leave janitors and their families with even less means to provide for their basic needs. Our many faiths reject as unjust those economic relationships that leave one party struggling for sufficiency. And we will stand firmly with immigrant janitors should they need to go on strike to gain this security for themselves and their families.

Janitors work hard to maintain clean environments that allow us to work, learn, and grow with dignity. It is time the business community offers them employment terms that allow them to do the same.

We stand Firmly With the Janitors.

'Tis the season to give a tech toy

► Kiddie tablets and other tech toys top Toy Insider gift list ► Coming out on top? ► LeapFrog Enterprises Inc.'s LeapPad 2 ► The traditional toys that get a tech spin

Tablets made for young kids and other electronic toys are expected to be found under many Christmas trees this year, as parents who are fans of gadgets such as Apple Inc.'s iPad look for products tailored to the younger set.

The Toy Insider, a holiday gift guide from a publisher serving the toy and licensing industries, as well as major toy sellers Walmart and Toys R Us, all put LeapFrog Enterprises Inc.'s LeapPad 2 on their lists of top toys for the 2012 holiday season.

In 2011, the first edition of the LeapPad was on several lists and sold well. This year, an updated version of the $99.99 tablet has a faster processor, twice as much memory and an additional camera on the front of the device.

"It's going to be the war of the tablets," said Laurie

Schacht, chief executive and president of Adventure Publishing, which issues the Toy Insider Hot 20 list. "What the LeapPad 2 has done is it has really positioned itself not to be part of that tablet war but to be an item for younger kids that gets them ready to move

Toy Insider's list, set to be released on Tuesday, includes the LeapPad 2 in its lineup of toys for ages 3 to 5, and the Kurio 7 tablet from Techno Source is for children who are between 6 and 8 years old.

Other hot toys

Other toys on the Toy Insider list include the Lego Friends Heartlake Stables, a Lego set geared toward girls.

A new high school play set for Mattel's Monster High is on lists from Toy Insider and Walmart.

Activision Blizzard Inc.'s Skylanders series of video games and action figures is on the Toy Insider list and the Eleven of the 20 items on the Toy Insider list have manufacturers' suggested prices of less than $50.

What, you mean you don't want to hear all about his new world order?

RE: "THERE'S (MAYBE) A TIME AND A PLACE — THIS ISN'T IT" (METRO, SEPT. 25) Regarding Iran's president Ahmadinejad's speaking at the U.N. today, Yom Kippur, how would Christians feel if he gave a speech at the U.N. vowing destruction of America and all Christians on Christmas Day or Easter Sunday?

Wanted: Contractor with character; experience optional

RE: "WINNER TAKES ALL — OF THE FACTS" (METRO, SEPT. 26) Letter writer Don Cancelmo contradicts himself. By his own words: "The problem had been building for many years [before Bush took office]." Isn't he saying it took more than four years for something to materialize? Not every result materializes in less than four years. The economy of a great nation is far more complex than building a house foundation. Fixing a mess of a global magnitude not seen in decades takes time. Yes, I would hire someone who's making progress despite facing a monumental challenge and roadblocks at every turn — he's making progress! It shows character and determination!

RE: "WHO'S AFRAID OF A LITTLE INFLATION?" (METRO, SEPT. 25) Re: David Snieckus' fantasy that all you have to do is print money to become fiscally responsible. Did you ever go to school? Governments get their money by taxing the private sector. There has to be something backing the paper or it becomes worthless. You will be paying with a fistful of money to buy a loaf of bread. Conjuring up the spirits

► The Boston Cocktail Summit will raise a glass to the region's crafters
 ► Have no fear, novices ► There is something for every type of drinker

While New England is no stranger to beer fests, the city will see its first major cocktail-centric extravaganza take place next weekend with the Boston Cocktail Summit. The gathering will bring together a showcase of fine spirits, cocktail tastings, informative seminars and lectures and appearances from some of the biggest local and international names in the bartending world.

Spearheaded by organizers and veteran Boston bartenders Alexei Beratis and Jamie Walsh, it comes at a time when Boston has finally carved out a respected space for itself on the na-

"Boston has been a growing destination city, and our bartenders and cocktail bars have helped create that, but never received the recognition as the chefs ... have," Beratis says. "Over the past few years the recognition has started to come on the national level, but this type of event is long overdue."

► Alexei Beratis is pictured here enjoying a cocktail, which he'll probably also do a bit of next week.

The summit features about 60 seminars and panel discussions led by the likes of cocktail experts Dale DeGroff, David Wondrich, F. Paul Pacult, Gaz Regan, Steve Olson and Wayne Curtis, as well as the cream of Boston's own crop like Brother Cleve, John Gertsen, Misty Kalkofen and Jackson Cannon. The range of topics covered will move from master-level certification classes in mezcal to the history of Boston's bar culture and in-depth looks at specific spirits. Yours truly will make an appearance on Saturday in the author's lounge among a lineup of much more talented and important writers.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

Regional and revolutionary cocktails

Though it's similar to other established festivals, such as Tales of the Cocktail in New Orleans, Beratis says there's a decided Northeast feel to the event, including sessions that focus on rum, which he refers to as "the spirit that built New England."

The festivities will also feature sessions that look into the historical aspects of punch and cocktails from the area in the 18th century. "These give the event a more regional feel than others of this type," says Beratis.

Harvard is back in session

► We're not talking about the Ivy League school ► This Brewery and Ale House has been a cornerstone of Harvard Square for the past 20 years ► Be sure not to miss the beer pizza

Just in time for class, John Harvard's Brewery & Ale House is back in business after a summer makeover that spruced up the Harvard Square hangout. However, the question arises as to if you should drink your beer or eat it — or do both. This 20-year-old brewpub's beer and brewing by-products flavor the ale-battered fish, ale-steamed clams and a bourbon-and-ale salmon. Still, nowhere outside of a glass is beer more pungent a flavor than in the spent grain pizzas, which incorporate the post-brew mash (spent grain that's usually discarded or used as animal feed) into the crust. This is pizza with a whole other dimension of taste, one of wine-y beer flavor that's perfect with the melted fontina and organic chicken topping. (Pair with the West Coast Pale Ale and it's pizza-beer heaven.)

The menu uses organic chicken either roasted or in a sandwich and offers vegetarian options such as a chickpea-and-buckwheat burger with portobellos. It's a welcome progressive attitude, adding to the brewpub's eco/enviro plus side — drinking doesn't get any more local than a brewpub, after all. But John Harvard's isn't trying to be slow-food: It's a casual place to share a giant plate of nachos, chow a huge burger — say The Dunster, topped with bacon, smoked gouda and a luscious big onion ring — or snack on a quesadilla with spicy smokey poblano and sweet corn kernels.

Interestingly, the stained glass "windows" are artifacts from the original build-out in 1992, which cut back to the basic stonework and exposed brick, where these unusual works were uncovered. Where else are Bobby Orr, Richard Nixon, Lyndon B. Johnson, Joe Namath and Humphrey Bogart posed as saints?

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

► John Harvard's includes locations in Framingham, Providence, R.I., and Lake Grove, N.Y. It's at Jiminy Peak and Holiday Valley Resorts, too.

UNHOLY FATHER

MAXIMILIA LUKACS

► The man who has been born again as Father John Misty has a lot of fun on 'Fear Fun' ► Distancing himself from his solo and Fleet Foxes past, Joshua Tillman talks about his artistic awakening

"Fear Fun" is the debut by Father John Misty, but the man behind the moniker, Joshua Tillman, has been putting out albums for the past eight years, recording as a member of Fleet Foxes, Saxon Shore and on his own as J. Tillman. These previous efforts, mostly characterized by their solemnity, bear little resemblance to his recent outpouring of manic psychedelic folk.

"I was obliged to make some changes after some realizations that I had about myself," says Tillman. "I was on autopilot for a few years with the J. Tillman thing."

On "Fear Fun," the songs ooze with an exuberance of being born again, but for Father John Misty that doesn't necessarily mean a pious awakening. Against some of the same warm quilts of harmony that make Fleet Foxes sound so comforting, Tillman sings words that are frank and funny and often deal with sex and drugs. If it weren't for this content, you could almost picture him dancing to these funky songs with some groovy monster on "The Muppet Show."

His voice is one of confidence and clarity, and against the dark decadence of his lyrics, it blurs the line between reverence and irreverence.

As opposed to the bleak and serious artwork on his solo records, the album art on "Fear Fun" is deeply hallucinogenic, with liner notes inside that provide commentary and peculiar subtitles for each song.

Tillman says coming up with this part of the album was a cathartic process.

"I was just sick of identifying myself as a songwriter and subsequently like a failure of a songwriter or something," he says. "Around that time, the sound of an acoustic guitar made me nauseous, like I couldn't even deal with it, and so I left Seattle and I just wanted to get back to my humanity. And it's funny because with songwriting, you get so used to only pulling from certain aspects of your imagination or your emotional quotient. You get so used to farming from these very specific parts of yourself that at some point you

Nothing is sacred

In addition to the new name with which Father John Misty has ordained himself, "Fear Fun" teems with references to biblical figures and holy places. But Tillman says nothing is sacred here.

"Really, it just kind of aligns with my sensibilities of what I think is funny," he says. "I do think music that is popular right now is so insubstantial, and there is very little acknowledgement of prevalent images or mythology. ... I know that religion is like an antiquated thing, but it still, for whatever reason, really resonates with people, and the subversion of those images resonates. It's not out of devotion, but if I'm going to write from my conversational voice, there's tons of that s— rattling around in my brain just from my formative years, and I really get some enjoyment out of subverting conventional wisdom regarding those symbols."

start to believe that those are the only parts of yourself that have substance or worth. I was just sort of sick of feeling like a one-dimensional entity in terms of creativity, so I started writing up the book that's in the album and I wasn't beholden to these aesthetic parameters that I was musically. I quickly discovered what I perceived to be far more engaging in that medium, creatively. I was laughing a lot the whole time I was writing."

Tony Savarino: 'Guitaresque' hero

Being able to call yourself Boston-based is one thing — Boston-bred is another. They don't come more homegrown than South Boston native Tony Savarino, who still lives in Fort Point, near where he grew up. His new record, "Guitaresque," is the result of the city's musical stew.

"Two of my favorite guitarists in the whole world live in Boston: Duke Levine and Kevin Barry," says Savarino, name-checking two players whose collective resumes include Peter Wolf, J. Geils Band, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Ray LaMontagne and Paula Cole.

Levine guests on "Guitaresque." "Basically, I'm ripping off a lot from Duke, and I'm not ashamed to say that. He and Kevin mentored me quite a bit. They are kind of like the roots guitar gods. My code names for them is that Duke Levine is Yoda and Kevin is Obi-Wan Kenobi," he laughs, before saying, "Yeah, I'm a total geek."

By day, Savarino is a guitar teacher, and his student alums' bands include the Luxury and the Crushing Low. But he also counts hobbyists and would-be rockers as clients.

"Because of where I live, a lot of my students work in the Financial District. I teach guitar to most of the 1 percent," he jokes.

Savarino also plays in local psych rockers Black Fortress of Opium. As a self-confessed former heavy-metal kid, Savari-no's objective was to create music with broader appeal than the widdly-diddly extravaganzas of Yngwie Malmsteen and Steve Vai. Once again, Boston stepped up.

"I have to thank the city of Boston, because Boston has great college radio stations. They exposed me to so much different music: weird '50s instrumental music, French pop from the '60s. I'm listening to this all the time ... and thinking of ways to make guitar music without it sounding all, I don't know, Cirque du Soleil — music that's proficient, but doesn't say anything." ◆ LINDA LABAN

8:20 P.M., NFLN

FALCONS (3-0)

They aren't just beating people, they are stomping them — and Matt Ryan looks like he has taken the next step in his development to elite status.

TEXANS (3-0)

The 31-25 score against the Broncos was closer than it really was due to a second-half prevent defense. Houston and Atlanta are 1a, 1b in the NFL. It's that close.

49ERS (2-1)

Maybe the Niners were reading their own press clippings heading into Week 3. This defense is too nasty, too mean-spirited to stay down. Bounce-back week.

RAVENS (2-1)

The win over New England was the most inspirational game played — for Torrey Smith's bro — since the Brett Favre tribute to his dad. And just as successful.

CARDINALS (3-0)

Don't look now, Arizona is legit. With a swarming, attacking defense, they just need Kevin Kolb to manage the game. Can he do it?

GIANTS (2-1)

Eli Manning is hitting mid- to late-season form earlier than expected. More impressive, the Giants are winning despite key injuries to starters. Very dangerous combo.

BENGALS (2-1)

Some say razzle-dazzle plays like Mohamed Sanu's bomb to A.J. Green mask weaknesses. We say, if you can execute it properly, it's pure genius.

SEAHAWKS (2-1)

Controversy aside, Pete Carroll's defense, led by the Legion of Boom, is a nightmare matchup for any team. And no one wants a road game in Seattle. No one.

PACKERS (1-2)

As stifled as Aaron Rodgers and Co. looked at times Monday night, they still won the game. Yes, they won that game. End of story.

EAGLES (2-1)

We still don't know what kind of team this is. They could be 0-3. Mike Vick could get benched. Andy Reid might trim his mustache. Still, they are in the thick of it.

PATRIOTS (1-2)

Yes, the officiating has been atrocious, but Bill Belichick has to control his emotions. The Pats aren't winning anything without him on the sideline.

VIKINGS (2-1)

They're in first place in the NFC North and a dominating win over the 49ers. It's time to start taking notice of Minnesota, and Christian Ponder as well.

JETS (2-1)

The Jets were a very flawed team with Darrelle Revis. Without him, watch them slip lower and lower in these power rankings.

BEARS (2-1)

They survived another bad performance from everyone's favorite whipping boy Jay Cutler. If the Bears can get it rolling, like in Week 1, they could be scary. Could be.

COWBOYS (2-1)

Linebacker Sean Lee summed it up best: "Ugly is good if we win." Dallas is still searching for its identity, yet they are tied for first atop NFC East standings.

BRONCOS (1-2)

For the second straight week, the Broncos got punched in the mouth and came up short in a second-half rally. The learning curve continues for Peyton Manning and Co.

Calling the shots

► McDaniels' play-calling has been all over the place in the early going
 ► What he's doing different than Bill O'Brien ► Not nearly as pass-happy

With the insane popularity of fantasy football and the video game series Madden, every slob across the country thinks it must be easy to make the split-second decisions on the sidelines that can ultimately win or lose games in the NFL.

That's more so the case here. When you have a team with a Hall of Fame quarterback and incredible weapons like Rob Gronkowski, Wes Welker, Brandon Lloyd and Aaron Hernandez, it should be simple to hang 40 points on the scoreboard — no matter the opponent.

Only three games into the 2012 regular season, it's impossible to make any grand statements on offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels' latest tenure. He does, however, appear obsessed with wide receiver Julian Edelman and running back Danny Woodhead. They can both make plays, but he doesn't seem to realize that they are best utilized in small doses. How do you explain Woodhead getting more carries than Stevan Ridley Sunday in Baltimore?

O'Brien's units were always near the top of the league in points and a slew of offensive categories — hence why he got that awful job in state college — but what was his particular style? I'd have to say using Brady primarily out of the shotgun formation and throwing the ball all over the field to a variety of receivers. That's not exactly revolutionary, since you could say that about many teams in the current NFL. But it got the job done for the most part.

O'Brien also favored throwing the ball in pretty much any situation other than short-yard and goal line opportunities for BenJarvus Green-Ellis or running out the clock. Again, that's how it is around the league: It's all about the passing game, particularly when you have such great skill-position players.

Pats with blinders, not looking back

► Brady, offense shifts focus to mammoth D-line of Bills ► Defense prepping to face dynamic back Spiller

(TIM ROGAS/GETTY IMAGES)

Tom Brady has moved on from Week 2 and Week 3.

He's not concerned with replacement officials' incompetence either.

For Brady and the Pats, the blinders are on — and they're staring straight ahead to Buffalo. If you don't know anything about what goes on in Gillette Stadium, know this: Win or lose, the Patriots don't look back.

"You can't sit around for four days and mourn a loss and say, 'gosh, this is the end of our year,'" Brady said.

What they'll see in Buffalo is a solid offense and a stronger defense that now includes All-Pro defensive end Mario Williams. The Bills have nine sacks on the year. By comparison, the Patriots, Dolphins, and Jets have combined for nine sacks on the year — each with three, tied for second-worst in the NFL. New England's pass rush has been an eyesore, just like their inability to score touchdowns in the red zone (50 percent of their trips).

► Sterling Moore and the Patriots defense will need to have a better showing than they had last week.
